Address of Thanks for His Majesty's Speech from the Throne; and to assure His Majesty that the House are deeply sensible of His parental Regard for His Subjects, in having omitted no Endeavours for setting on Foot Negotiations to restore Peace to Europe: That they rejoice to learn, that the Steps which have been taken for this Purpose, have at length opened the Way to an immediate and direct Negotiation, which, they doubt not, will be so conducted on His Majesty's Part, as either to produce an honourable Peace, or to prove, to what Cause alone the Prolongation of the War must be ascribed: That they are fully sensible, that nothing can so much contribute to the Restoration of general Peace, as manifesting that they possess both the Determination and the Resources to oppose, with increased Activity and Energy, the further Efforts with which they may have to contend: That this they feel to be peculiarly necessary, when an Intention has been openly manifested of attempting a Descent on these Kingdoms: That they have observed with just Satisfaction, that by the Skill and Exertions of the Navy, their Commerce has been protected to a Degree beyond Example: That they consider the Operations in the East and West Indies as productive of great National Advantage, and as displaying the Valour of His Majesty's Forces: That they reflect, with Admiration and Joy, on the honourable and dignified Perseverance of the Emperor, and on the invincible Spirit of the Austrian Forces under the Conduct of the Archduke Charles, and they entertain the most sanguine Hope, that the final Result of the Campaign may prove more disastrous to the Enemy, than its Commencement and Progress for a Time were favourable to their Hopes: That, while they regret the hostile Conduct of the Court of Madrid, which have led to the Discussions now depending, they entertain a just Confidence, that whenever they are acquainted with the final Result, a further Proof will be given to Europe of the Temper and Prudence which govern His Majesty's Proceedings; and they cannot too strongly express their fixed Determination to support His Majesty with their Lives and Fortunes, in defending, against every Aggression, the Interests of the British Empire: To assure His Majesty, that He may at all Times rely on the Zeal and Affection of His faithful Commons for such Supplies as may be necessary for the Service of the Year; and that it must afford them the most cordial Satisfaction to find that, notwithstanding the temporary Embarrassments which have been experienced, the State of the Country proves the real Extent and Solidity of the Public Resources: That they acknowledge with the utmost Thankfulness and Satisfaction, that the Distresses experienced from the Scarcity of Corn, are now happily removed; and that an abundant Harvest affords the pleasing Prospect of Relief: That with equal Satisfaction, they reflect on the uninterrupted Continuance of internal Tranquillity, and the happy Effects produced by the Energy and Wisdom of the Laws in repressing Anarchy and Confusion: And, to beseech His Majesty to
